The Academic Traveler presents New York: A Culinary Adventure, an educational travel program dedicated to the food culture of New York City. Participants will get an insider’s view of markets and restaurants in New York, a true melting pot of world cuisines. Academic Travelers will:

- Tour the shops of Chelsea Market, home of the Food Network.
- Experience Chinatown and all the unique foods it has to offer like dim sum, scallion pancakes, and bubble tea.
- Explore fantastic culinary supply shops including Broadway Panhandler and Bowery Kitchen.
- Take a multi-ethnic tasting tour, exploring the history and sampling the foods that enrich the Chinese, Italian, and Jewish neighborhoods of Lower Manhattan.
- Lunch at one of New York’s exceptional farm-to-table restaurants followed by a tour of the famous Union Square Greenmarket, the largest farmers’ market in the city.

The tour director for New York: A Culinary Adventure is Cory Lewis, chef, artist, and adjunct assistant professor of art at the University of Mississippi.

The program fee is $1595 per person (double occupancy). The registration deadline is July 21, but space is limited, so register early to secure a space. Payroll deduction is available for University of Mississippi faculty and staff. Painlessly pay for your trip over up to 12 pay periods.

Included in the program cost:
- Pre-departure educational material
